

Step 1: Referencing when?

Reference: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - When quoting (=using the exact text of someone else). - When paraphrasing (= someone else’s text in your own words). 	Do not reference: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - When you give an overview of historical facts. - Your own experiences or observations. - When repeating information that you’ve already referenced in conclusions or summaries. - When summarizing “general knowledge”

Step 2: How to quote and paraphrase?

Quoting: Short quotations (fewer than 40 words) The citation is placed in the text and in double quotation marks. Always include a reference with the citation in the text (author, year of publication, p. page number): Long quotations (from 40 words). The citation is started in a new line, indented (1.3 cm) and without quotation marks in block citation format. In the case of the use of block citation, the reference does not form part of the sentence, as in the case of the short citation and is therefore placed after the period. Paraphrasing: If you paraphrase correctly, you will show the reader the following in the text: Although I expressed it in my own words, the idea is someone else’s, namely: (Author, year). You use paraphrasing to facilitate the reader’s comprehension of the text. You are not allowed to simply take over the text. To be able to paraphrase, you must read the text through until you understand it sufficiently to be able to rephrase it in your own words and in a new construction without having to look at the source while writing. When paraphrasing, you always retain your own writing style; which is more convenient for the reader.	Keep the paraphrases and citations short. Use them to support not to replace your own ideas!

Step 3: In text reference

In general: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - In text reference for paraphrases as follows: (author, year). - In text reference for quotes: (author, year, p. xx) if there is no page number use title. - No year: use n.d. (=no date). - No author: title moves in place of author. - More than one author: use “and” between the last and next to last author in the running sentence. ... by Eco and Smith (2010)... - “ “ “ : use the ampersand “&” between the last and next to last author in parenthesis. ...(Johnson & Smith, 2010). - More than 2 auteurs: use “, &” between the last and next to last author in parenthesis ... (Jansen, Hof, & Smith, 2010). - 3 - 5 authors: 1st time in a report mention all authors, 2nd time (exactly the same source) the first author followed by et al. - 6 or more authors: just the first author followed by et al. - Indirect reference (a publication discussed in a secondary source) - Organizations: full name, unless common e.g. (UNESCO, 2009). - Personal communication. - Give the reference directly with the used keyword, phrase or passage. 	Examples: ...(Johnson, 2010). ...Eco (1994, p. 23). ...(Johnson, n.d.). ...(Publication manual, 2010). ... by Eco and Smith (2010)... ...(Johnson & Smith, 2010). ...(Jansen, Hof, & Smith, 2010). ... (Smith et al., 2010). Smith (as cited in Jones, 2002), found... ... as the University of Toronto (1998) has... ...(J. Smith, personal communication, July 5, 2010). ...according to Eco (1994) the ... are...
---	--

Step 4: Where to place the citation in the text?

Depending on what you want to emphasize, you can order the citation information differently: Direct quote: According to Hofstede (2001), “the dominance of technology over culture is an illusion” (p. 453). In fact, “the dominance of technology over culture is an illusion”, according to Hofstede (2001, p.453). In 2001, Hofstede already stated that “the dominance of technology over culture is an illusion”(p.453). Hofstede’s study (2001) points out that “the dominance of technology over culture is an illusion”(p. 453). Paraphrase: Hofstede’s statement (2001) indicates that the usage of technology is influenced by culture and can therefore differ across the globe. The usage of technology is influenced by culture and can therefore differ across the globe (Hofstede, 2001). In 2001, Hofstede pointed out that the usage of technology is influenced by culture and can therefore differ across the globe.

Step 5: What do you include in the reference list?

Include:

- All the sources that you've used in the text.
- Make one list for all references.
- The reference list is alphabetical.
- Place it in the back of your report, dissertation, etc.

Do not include:

- Sources that you did not use in your text but are interesting.
- Quick reference, e.g. currency converter, timetable or route planner.
- Personal communication like interviews, telephone conversations.
- Include homepage URL's in the text only like ...(www.stenden.com).
